Opining on The Russian-Ukraine Crisis

The Russia-Ukraine war is an ongoing conflict, but there are many relevant issues in our history which lead Russia to retaliate this way. Ukraine was planning to join NATO (North Atlantic treaty organisation) which is an international military alliance led by America. The fact of the matter is that America and Russia have been enemies for a long period of time and American military troops on the neighbour's borders would definitely be a huge threat to Russia. In addition, in the past, Ukraine had been a part of Russia for a long period of time. These issues seem pertinent to Russian leadership and this is Russia's side of the story.

During the Russia-Ukraine crisis, Russia has presented an image of national interest to protect itself from foreign threat. That is the justification of attacking Ukraine. There can also be the possible interest in regaining Ukrainian territory which had been part of the Russian landmass both during the Romanov empire's regime and the period of the Soviet Union. Also, Ukraine is a mineral rich country and also the bread basket of the world. However, the worst aspect of the conflict is the potential nuclear threat which could put our future of the planet at stake.

The Russia-Ukraine Crisis could potentially lead to World War 3! My support is inclined to Ukraine especially looking back on the history, the attack is a direct violation of the Budapest Memorandum-1994 which assured Ukraine territorial independence in exchange for NPT. Russia identifies the main cause of this war as Ukraine wanting to join NATO and Russia has been using its VETO power in the UN Security Council to prevent other countries from passing resolutions to help stop the war. The situation is a little tricky and the world eagerly awaits to see the outcome while keeping its fingers crossed that there is no nuclear war.

The Russian-Ukraine War or the biggest international topic at this moment is a big concern, it may complete one year on 24th Feb 2023! Have you ever wondered how will it end? Or why doesn't the UN intervene? Well, Russia has 'Veto Power' in the Security Council of the United Nations. Currently, it is using it as a personal advantage. This prevents the UN from helping Ukraine as it has to obey its own laws. In my opinion, this gives Russia an upper hand in the war.
